ABSTRACT

The resources and services of academic, special, and large public libraries in Pennsylvania are described in this directory. The information was collected from questionnaires sent to the libraries, and the substance of the directory--mostly personnel, volume and type of collections--reflects the responses to those questionnaires. Separate indexes are provided for each of the three types of libraries and also for subjects. (WH)

INTRODUCTION

The first edition of this directory was published in 1971 under the title - Directory of Pennsylvania Academic and Research Libraries. It was produced under the direction of John McCrossan, the State Library's Coordinator of Interlibrary Cooperation.

Major purposes of this volume, as of its predecessor, are to promote interlibrary cooperation and to improve access to the resources and services of libraries which have extensive special or unique collections. For information about public libraries which are not included, the reader is referred to another State Library publication - Pennsylvania Public Libraries Directory.

John McCrossan served as overall supervisor of this project which was funded by the State Library with Library Services and Construction Act Title III monies. Project research was carried out by Brigitte Kenney and assistants at the Library School of Drexel University. I would like to thank both Dr. McCrossan and Mrs. Kenney for the production of such an excellent and useful second edition of the Directory of Pennsylvania Library Resources.

State Librarian

PREFACE

A Directory of Pennsylvania Library Resources: A Guide to the Resources and Services of Academic, Special, and Large Public Libraries has been completed on request by the State Library of Pennsylvania and with an LSCA Title III grant to support the work. Because of the rapid increase in library resources in Pennsylvania it was thought that the first directory should be updated and expanded. This has been done, and the results follow.

Approximately 700 questionnaires were mailed to academic, selected public, and special libraries in Pennsylvania. The first directory was used as a beginning mailing list; additions were made from the American Library Directory, Philadelphia Special Libraries Directory, Pittsburgh Special Libraries Directory, Kruzas' Directory of Special Libraries and Information Centers, and The Education Directory: Higher Education published by the U.S. Government Office of Educational Opportunity.

Responses were received from 491 libraries; of those responding 51 did not wish to be included in the directory. 205 libraries did not respond; we used information from the above sources for 37 of these. Total number of entries in the directory is as follows:

Academic Libraries	226
Special Libraries	224
Public Libraries	27

Two follow-ups resulted in the excellent return rate of almost 71%. We wish to acknowledge with gratitude the help of all the busy librarians who took time to fill out the extensive questionnaire.

We have tried to be careful in the compilation of this directory. However, it is likely that errors have crept in. We ask that you note corrections and submit them to the State Library of Pennsylvania, Bureau of Library Development.

I want to express my special thanks to Lois Bronstein who managed the entire project with resourcefulness, imagination, and patience. She received a great deal of help from Robert W. Ditmer and Lee Lourea. I am grateful to all three of these people.

We hope that the Directory will be another step toward increased interlibrary cooperation in Pennsylvania. Because it pinpoints specific resources of major libraries in the state, it should contribute materially to the sharing of resources among them.

HOW TO USE THIS DIRECTORY

The Directory is arranged in a single alphabet by name of parent institution, and by name of library for parent institutions with more than one library. An asterisk next to an institution or library name indicates that no response was received to our questionnaire. We have used information from other sources to include thirty-seven of the non-respondents.

In order to make it easier for librarians to complete the questionnaires, we indicated that we would use information from Lee Ash's Subject Collections, 3d ed. if so indicated on the questionnaire. Several libraries took advantage of this offer and we have included their subject collections as listed in Ash.

The first index is by type of library and is divided into three sections listing academic, special, and public libraries separately. Within each group libraries are arranged as above. The second index is by subject. Library of Congress subject headings were used insofar as possible. Numbers following each subject heading indicate pages on which this particular subject may be found.

Wherever libraries indicated subject strengths rather than specific subject headings, we either translated them into L.C. headings or created new headings (in cases where appropriate L.C. headings could not be found). Some headings were changed which seemed archaic.

Headings were used for special collections, subject strengths or specialities, and current acquisitions of special libraries.

The Union Library Catalogue, a non-profit corporation, was organized in 1935 to provide and coordinate bibliographical services to the community. The Catalogue of 4,000,000 cards describes 8,000,000 volumes in 207 libraries
(115 active and 92 inactive)

The Catalogue's services are: location of books and journals in the area or in one or more libraries in the State of Pennsylvania; the identification of books and periodicals, i.e.
publisher, price, date of publication and correct author and title for books, and for periodicals the frequency, date of initial issue, and publisher; the interpretation of local library resources in specific subject subject fields, and the provision of a clearing house for cooperative measures between libraries.

The Catalogue's services are rendered to the public libraries in the state through the District Libraries. The holdings of the four Regional Resource Libraries are included in the Catalogue.

The Catalogue maintains a bibliographic reference collection of the standard tools in addition to other specialized bibliographic tools useful in identifying and locating periodicals.
